MEMORANDUM

TO: Mayor and Council
FROM: Geno Palazzari, Communications Manager
DATE: May 31, 2018
RE: Climb Wyoming Grant

I received a call from Climb Wyoming Program Director Stacie McDonald regarding a $1M grant that Climb is receiving from United Health Foundation. The grant was awarded to allow Climb to share their strategies and curriculum with Utah and Colorado. The purpose of the call was two-fold. Most importantly, it was to inform us of the incredible success of Climb Wyoming. It certainly is another validation for how successful the program is. While the grant is significant, it is not being used for operations in the State of Wyoming. This also means that any 1% funds that have been donated to Climb are not being used in other states, but continue to benefit the local program in Gillette.

I am attaching an article from the Casper Star-Tribune that provides further explanation of the Climb program and the purpose of the grant.

Wyoming nonprofit that benefits single mothers receives $1 million grant to share its strategy

Climb Wyoming, a nonprofit that seeks to benefit single mothers, has received a three-year, $1 million grant from a national health foundation to share its approach in other states.

The grant will allow Climb to take its method — providing training and help so single mothers can economically benefit — to Utah and Colorado, said Shannon Brooks Hamby, the group's director of advancement. The goal isn't to open chapters of Climb in those two states, she explained, but to bring the groups “curriculum” and share it with already-existing organizations.

United Health Foundation awarded the grant. It was announced recently at a joint reception in Washington, D.C., with Wyoming Sens. John Barrasso and Mike Enzi and Rep. Liz Cheney.

Climb has six sites across the state of Wyoming, Brooks Hamby said.

“We run you know 12 to 13 programs a year through the six sites and ... we really intentionally work with groups of single mothers, not only to help them create social networks, but also to accelerate the development of executive functioning skills alongside job skills. Climb also is really innovative in developing employment trainings based on the needs of employers on the ground in a timely way.”

The training program is “pretty comprehensive,” Brooks Hamby added. It teaches budgeting, nutrition, parenting skills and more.

It also gets results: She said that about half of the women who enter are employed in low-wage, part-time work that provides no benefits. The other half are unemployed. Their average wage is about $1,000 a month.

Three months after completing the program, the women’s average wage rises to $2,100 a month. After two years, it’s $2,400. More than 70 percent will have jobs. There’s an 84 percent decrease in the use of food stamps, and a 45 percent decrease in the use of public insurance.

“We are honored to partner with Climb and help connect more women and families to these critical social support services,” UnitedHealthcare CEO Steve Nelson said in a press release. “This partnership will enable us to help families achieve lasting self-sufficiency and to build healthier and stronger communities in Wyoming, Utah and Colorado.”

Brooks Hamby said the grant money will go toward turning Climb’s method into a transferable curriculum. The rest will be used for teaching and delivering that curriculum to Utah and Colorado organizations.

Campbell County Commissioners
500 South Gillette Avenue
Gillette, WY 82716

Chairman Christensen:

On behalf of the City Council, I would like to thank you and all the Campbell County Commissioners, for your past support of the City of Gillette's Drive and Drop Spring Cleanup. This is another great example of the benefits of our continued partnership.

Over the three Saturdays of the event, 192.75 tons of demolition debris and municipal solid waste were collected. This resulted in $14,450 in tipping fees. We are making a request to you to waive a portion or all the tipping fees associated with this event. This event was open to all Campbell County residents. These clean up events help to beautify Gillette and Campbell County after the long winter, and are a great teaching tool for our youth. Administrator Davidson and a member of the City Council are more than willing to discuss this at your earliest convenience. Please contact City Administration to set up a time. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Louise Carter-King
Mayor

Gillette, WY 82716

Chairman Hastings:

On behalf of the City Council, I would like to commend you and all the Campbell County Cemetery District Board members and cemetery staff for the immaculate care that has been taken with the grounds of Mount Pisgah. At the most recent City Council Work Session, Councilman Robin Kuntz made a point to express his sincere admiration for the beauty of Mount Pisgah Cemetery during the Memorial Day ceremonies.

Every day of the year, the Cemetery District provides our community a place of peace and solace to remember and honor those that we have lost; for that, you should be commended. It is on Memorial Day that your organization truly shines. Thank you for your dedication to our veterans, especially those that we have lost. Gillette is and always will be a beacon of light and support for all veterans; living and deceased. Your contribution to honoring them is immeasurable.

Warmest Regards,

Louise Carter-King
Mayor

Wyoming Infrastructure Authority Partners with National Carbon Capture Center

Cheyenne, Wyoming – Wyoming Infrastructure Authority (WIA) announced today a partnership agreement with the U.S. Department of Energy's (DOE) National Carbon Capture Center. Joining the center allows for the two entities to work cooperatively to bring innovative carbon capture technologies to commercial reality.

"The National Carbon Capture Center brings a vast network of energy experts and technical experience that can complement and enhance the work being done at the Wyoming ITC," said Executive Director of the Wyoming Infrastructure Authority Jason Begger. "Perfecting carbon technologies isn't going to happen in a vacuum. It is critical for Wyoming to tap into the work being done around the globe and help connect the dots to truly create game-changing energy technology. This partnership with the National Carbon Capture Center gives us another opportunity to do just that and we are pleased to be joining its mission."

"This new collaboration with the Wyoming Infrastructure Authority represents an important milestone in our efforts to advance the next generation of carbon capture solutions," said National Carbon Capture Center Director John Northington. "We look forward to working together with WIA toward our common goals of promoting technology innovation, a diverse energy mix and economic and energy security for our nation."

In addition to WIA, other partners of the National Carbon Capture Center include DOE and its National Energy Technology Laboratory, American Electric Power, Cloud Peak Energy, Duke Energy, the Electric Power Research Institute, Peabody and ClearPath.

The National Carbon Capture Center is a world-class neutral research facility working to advance technologies to reduce greenhouse gas emissions from natural gas and coal-based power plants. The facility recently surpassed 100,000 hours of technology testing for carbon capture innovators, and is recognized for its ability to bridge the gap between laboratory research and large-scale demonstrations.

In addition to utilizing technical guidance and cost-sharing, National Carbon Capture Center partner organizations have the opportunity to leverage the center's expertise in bringing carbon capture technologies to commercial reality. Partners also participate in the center's international leadership of organizations such as the International Test Center Network, a global carbon capture, utilization and storage technology coalition.

The Wyoming ITC was officially dedicated earlier this month in Gillette. The first tenants will be teams competing for the NRG COSIA Carbon XPRIZE. Kawasaki Heavy Industries will also be testing their solid sorbent capture technology at the ITC.

For more information on the NCCC, visit www.nationalcarboncapturecenter.com. For more information of the ITC, visit www.wyomingitc.org.

About WIA

The Wyoming Infrastructure Authority (WIA) is an instrumentality of the State of Wyoming whose purpose is to advance Wyoming's Energy Strategy by promoting the value of Wyoming's energy resources, supporting expanded infrastructure, enhancing resource development and operation, and ensuring a credible and objective voice for Wyoming. WIA is the managing entity for the Wyoming Integrated Test Center.

$1 billion in bonding authority was given to the WIA for the financing of infrastructure relative to facilities within its legislative purview. The authority was created by the State Legislature in 2004 and is governed by a five-member Board of Directors appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Wyoming State Senate.

About the ITC

The ITC is a public-private partnership designed to foster the next generation of energy technology. The ITC provides space for researchers to test Carbon Capture, Utilization and Sequestration (CCUS) technologies using actual coal-based flue gas from the Dry Fork Station near Gillette.

In 2014, with the support and encouragement of Governor Matt Mead, the Wyoming State Legislature allocated $15 million in funding for the design, construction and operation of an integrated test center to study the capture, sequestration and management of carbon emissions from a Wyoming coal-based power plant. An additional $5 million commitment from private industry was required under the appropriation, which has since been secured from the Tri-State Generation and Transmission Association in addition to $1 million from the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association. Basin Electric Power Cooperative is providing additional in-kind contributions including engineering and construction management services at the Dry Fork Station host site, which is jointly owned by Basin Electric and the Wyoming Municipal Power Agency.

The ITC is one of a handful of such facilities around the world and only the second one in the United States. While many carbon capture technologies are being developed and studied in laboratory settings, the ITC will be one of the few research and testing facilities at an operating coal-fired powered plant. The ITC allows for real world testing at an active power plant and alleviates typical concerns over being able to transfer technology from a lab to a plant.
